Winter is just about gone and such a beautiful winter spent at Gulf to Bay Trailer Park at Englewood, Fla. Here we renewed old friendships and added many new ones to our never forgotten list.

Days were filled with sun bathing, swimming and shell gathering, which were very popular especially among fishermen's wives. Altho many women enjoyed their fishing and returned with their prize catches. The shell gathering makes a wonderful hobby. Many have elaborate collections and altho I have become very interested and will continue to add more each winter, I cannot say what mine will become, except for the pleasure.

Evenings were spent at cards. Pictures shown by trailerites were of their travels throughout the United States, Mexico, Canada and Europe. On Saturday pot luck dinners. There were also picnics and of course shuffleboard and a game we all enjoyed.

This is new country district and is being built up by these Yankees, who are building new homes and businesses. These were the people, who came to spend a winter. There are also those who still live in their trailers from winter to winter and still have their homes in the north.

What a beautiful life for these retired couples who with their many ills and weakened hearts have added many more years by taking advantage of these ultra-violet sun rays, free to all. Granddad and I have changed our bleached skins for a coat of tan. We also have had our grapefruit and oranges which are in abundance. The strawberries are not only large and sweet but what a shortcake!

I'll miss these fresh vegetables and my green salads. All the perfect tomatoes, peppers, corn, beans and every other vegetable you could mention. Also the fish dinners. But I'll still be happy to be home again where I hope to try my luck with flowers, one of nature's most beautiful creations.
